

TURKISH PORTS ARE FILLED WITH MINES

Miss Lucille Swords Tells of Journey
Back to the United States.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—On the Standard Oil tank steamer Onega which reached her pier Thursday after a month's voyage from Salonica arrived Miss Lucille Swords of St. Louis, Mo., who left Constantinople a few days after Turkey declared war on Russia.

The Dardanelles and the sea of Marmora had been mined and the only possible chance she had of getting back was by way of Salonica where at the invitation of L. I. Thomas, manager of the Standard Oil Co., she was given accommodation with Mrs. Hugh Mitchell of Orange, N. J., on the tank steamer, an experience Miss Swords said she would not have missed for anything, but one she does not want to repeat.

"They did everything to make us comfortable," she said, "but you can imagine that there was none of the luxury of the trans-Atlantic lines. To make matters more exciting we stopped at Algiers for two days and put ashore a Chinese fireman who had smallpox. Then Mrs. Mitchell and myself were vaccinated."

Miss Swords went to Constantinople to visit her friend, Mrs. J. R. Byrne, wife of the paymaster aboard the United States torpedo destroyer Scorpion. Mrs. Mitchell was companion to the wife of one of the secretaries to the American legation.
